Chapter 160: The God of Creation and Abundance

As the God of Shadows and Life, Sung Jin-Woo had already ascended to unimaginable heights, mastering the realms of shadows, life, and the manipulation of the very essence of existence. However, through his continued evolution, he found himself stepping into a new domain - the domain of Creation and Abundance. His newfound title reflected his vast powers of creation, nurturing, and the bountiful proliferation of life across the multiverse.

The Domain of Creation

As the God of Creation, Sung Jin-Woo's abilities expanded beyond simply manipulating or controlling life. He could now forge new worlds, bring forth entire ecosystems, and create living beings from the very fabric of reality.

1. World-Forming Power

Sung Jin-Woo could now shape entire worlds through his will alone. He could craft habitable realms, from simple environments to complex systems teeming with life. Each world created by him was imbued with divine energy, ensuring that they were self-sustaining and prosperous.

2. Creation of Life Forms

No longer bound by limitations, he could spawn life in any form - from celestial beings to mythical creatures, dragons, and humanoids. The fruits of the Second World Tree were only one of the many means through which he could create new beings.

He could also design the abilities and characteristics of these beings, ensuring they were aligned with his vision for balance and harmony.

3. Manifestation of New Divine Tools

His creative prowess extended to the forging of divine tools, artifacts, and even weapons. These items were manifestations of his will, crafted from the Absolute Crown and other rare materials. Each weapon and artifact created by Sung Jin-Woo was imbued with a piece of his essence, making them near-unstoppable in the hands of those worthy.

The Domain of Abundance

Sung Jin-Woo's ability to provide for his creations became another hallmark of his power. His domain of Abundance allowed him to nurture the worlds and beings he created, ensuring that resources, mana, and life itself flowed endlessly.

1. Mana Abundance

Sung Jin-Woo could bless entire realms with endless mana. Where mana had once been finite and limited, he could now create inexhaustible sources of power. These mana-rich realms flourished under his touch, providing limitless energy for both the living and the divine.

The Second World Tree was a perfect example of this. It acted as a conduit of this abundant mana, drawing power from the earth and surrounding realms, ensuring that the life forms born from it were imbued with extraordinary vitality and strength.

2. Creation of Wealth and Resources

In addition to life and mana, Sung Jin-Woo could summon wealth, including rare materials, precious gems, and powerful resources. These resources could be used to fuel the growth of civilizations or forge new divine tools.

The temples dedicated to him were surrounded by lush, fertile lands where resources grew in abundance, feeding the growing populations of worshippers, creatures, and soldiers.

3. Endless Life and Regeneration

The Water of Eternal Life, a gift granted to his most devoted followers, was a direct result of his dominion over abundance. This divine liquid allowed for the eternal vitality of its drinkers, healing them of injuries and ensuring that their lives were prolonged indefinitely.

His shadow soldiers, born from the essence of life and darkness, could now endure for even greater spans of time without diminishing. Their powers were fueled by the second black heart, ensuring that they could fight indefinitely without fatigue.

The Divine Influence of Creation and Abundance

Sung Jin-Woo's influence as the God of Creation and Abundance stretched far beyond mere creation and nurturing. His presence brought about profound changes in the multiverse.

1. Growth of the Temples of Shadows and Life

As his creations flourished, the Temples of Shadows and Life became even more central to the faith. With the Water of Eternal Life flowing freely within their walls, the monks and priests were able to thrive and become powerful figures, passing on their blessings to the worshippers who sought them.

The Second World Tree planted in the temple gardens produced fruits that nourished not only the body but also the spirit, ensuring the strength of the faith for generations to come.

2. Expansion of the Divine Armada

The divine armada grew, as new shadow soldiers were born from the abundance of life, their loyalty to Sung Jin-Woo unwavering. These soldiers were used to defend his realms, protect his creations, and spread his influence across the multiverse.

The divine tools, forged from his creative energy, were wielded by his most trusted followers, empowering them to carry out his divine will.

3. Universal Prosperity

The realms Sung Jin-Woo touched prospered. The once barren and desolate lands were revitalized, and new realms were born with the same abundance of life, mana, and resources. His creations, blessed by his power, ensured that balance was maintained, and that no single realm was left wanting.

The Evolution of Sung Jin-Woo

As Sung Jin-Woo grew into the God of Creation and Abundance, he transcended the limitations of his former self. He had already mastered the shadow and life, but now he could bend the very fabric of existence to his will. His power over creation and abundance made him an eternal figure, a beacon of life and prosperity, and a symbol of divine perfection in the multiverse.
